Park City's Leader in Luxury Lodging Invites Guests for Red Noses, Warm Hearts and Unforgettable Hospitality this Thanksgiving

Resorts West offers guests a relaxing mountain retreat and the opportunity to give back to local community this Thanksgiving

Park City, Utah – September 16, 2010 – Thanksgiving should be spent relaxing with family and friends – not marking items off of a to-do list. This November, Resorts West invites guests to gather at one of its elegant, private mountain homes with grocery delivery, housekeeping service following the holiday meal and even private chef service to maximize relaxation and quality time with loved ones. Guests can watch football on a big screen TV, take a walk through the breathtaking woods of Deer Valley or simply stroll along Main Street Park City. A complimentary third night stay is included for extra adventure after the Thanksgiving holiday.

Additionally, Resorts West offers guests the opportunity to give back to the local community that makes their vacation and Park City experience so memorable. Guests can help victims of domestic violence during the stressful and difficult holidays by donating to Peace House, an organization that provides counseling services, education and safe haven to abused women and children in Park City and surrounding areas. Resorts West will supply a copy of the Peace House "wish list" in each guest's pre-arrival materials - a list of ongoing needs at the shelter ranging from laundry detergent to children's toys. Guests can indicate their desire to donate by checking different items on their grocery list and their Resorts West private concierge will deliver the donated items to the Peace House office. Guests will receive a personalized Thank-You card from Peace House describing where their donation went and how it helped a family.

"Thanksgiving's such a special time here in Park City, we love being able to share that with our valued guests and their families," said Stacy Bauman, general manager, Resorts West. "This year, for the first time, we're giving guests the opportunity to help a local shelter here in Park City, if they choose, to help ease the stress and pain the holidays bring for some people. Every little bit helps at Peace House, and we're excited to extend an invitation to our guests and their families to reach out and give back to those in-need here in Park City."
